Pubs, Clubs, and Intoxicating Humour

Kate Davison (Oxford)
kate.davison@merton.ox.ac.uk
Admiration for Wit

Thomas Hobbes, Leviathan, (1651)

‘Celerity of Imagining, (that is, swift succession of one thought to another) ... there is nothing to observe ... but either in what they be like one another, or in what they be unlike’

‘Those that observe their similitudes, in case they be such as are but rarely observed by others, are sayd to have Good Wit’
Ned Ward’s ‘Jesting Manner’
Pubs and Clubs

Frontispiece from Daniel Gunston, Jemmy Twitcher’s Jests, (London, 1770)

Intoxicating Humour

Chapters
- ‘That One must be Merry’
- ‘That Wine Excites Mirth’
- ‘That Wine makes one Eloquent’
- ‘That Wine Creates Wit’

‘As Wine increases the Quantity of animal Spirits, by the Fumes it sends to the Brain, it is easy to comprehend, that it cannot but be of great Advantage to dull and heavy Wit... by warming the Thoughts, it renders them more acute, and inspires a greater plenty of witty Sallies’
Intoxicating Humour

An Oration in Praise of Drunkenness.

This Dome, this Lyceum is only consecrated to such whose smiling aspect bespeaks them friends to the good nature'd God of Wine, whose Sacred Rites I esteem, and whose eminent perfection, Drunkenness, I intend to make the subject of my ensuing discourse. Nor must the Philosophers or Divines here exert their Austerity, nor interpose with their Maxims of Decency and good Manners: I acknowledge my feel of no sect but that of Epicurus, whose Drunken Atoms Reel'd into Order, and fram'd a World so infinitely Beautiful. A World that produces ten Thousand Pleasures, but none so great or agreeable as those that proceed from the soft Enchantments of the Vine, a Plant that has greater Power over the Minds and Nature of Mankind, than the subtle Draughts of Circe or Medea, you smile and think me in the Condition, I would pertrude my Audience to be in. But Gentlemen——- you are mistaken, I am Sober to my own Misfortune; and Soberly, I desire, I advise and exhort you all to be Drunk, Sobriety makes a Man revengeful, or fit to ruin the Com-

“tis highly reasonable, that a Custom establish'd and continu'd since the beginning of the World to this Day, ought to be preserv'd inviolable; that a Custom fram'd and cemented by Nature, supported by Reason, and practised with success, ought to be deliver'd down to Posterity and be maintain'd with Honour, and had in Veneration by all succeeding Ages’

Tom Brown, 'An Oration in Praise of Drunkenness' in Works (1707)